

Security Guard Sues H&M for Injuries During Event Ft. David Beckham

Summary: An event featuring the soccer star David Beckham at an H&M left one security guard trampled by the adoring crowd.

David Beckham, the famous soccer star and all-around beautiful person, easily gets crowds swooning over him. Throw in an appearance at the Time Square H&M store and people will rush to get an autograph or picture with the star.

Read Making a Murderer Fans Attack Lawyer on Yelp.

The security guard at the H&M event featuring their spokesperson David Beckham is now suing the company after she was trampled. The guard claims she was crushed while working the event when “all hell broke loose.” There were barricades set up to help control the awaiting crowd but when Beckham arrived, they “suddenly malfunctioned.” It was then that she was thrown to the ground and crushed by the barricade and swarming crowd trying to reach the star.

See Justin Bieber Fans Injured During Oslo, Norway Concert.

The lawsuit does not specify what injuries the guard received but says they were severe. She is suing H&M and The Durst Organization. She is not suing Beckham.

Do you think this lawsuit has any merit and will go anywhere in court? Tell us in the comments below.

To learn more about devout fans, read Fans in Grief Over Fast and Furious Star Paul Walker's Fatal Crash.

Photo: forbes.com