

New York Mayor Adams Appoints and Reappoints 21 Judges

On 30th January 2023, New York City Mayor Eric Adams made a significant announcement regarding the appointment of 21 judges to the Family Court, Criminal Court, and Civil Court. These appointments aim to streamline the justice system and eliminate bottlenecks due to the COVID-19 pandemic.

Mayor Adams has appointed three judges to the Family Court and one to the Criminal Court. Additionally, he has reappointed three judges to the Family Court, ten to the Criminal Court, and four interim Civil Court judges. These appointments are part of the Mayor's vision for a safer city and his commitment to making the justice system more efficient, effective, and just for all.

The Mayor also convened a criminal justice summit in October, where a diverse group of stakeholders discussed concrete steps to keep New Yorkers safe. The summit revealed the need for a well-resourced judicial system to address the significant caseload and ensure justice for all New Yorkers.

Mayor Adams expressed his pride in the appointees, who he believes has the talent, experience, and dedication required to tackle the challenges faced by the city. He stated that the appointees are committed to carrying out the mission of creating a more just and equitable city.

Chief Counsel to the Mayor and City Hall Brendan McGuire echoed the Mayor's sentiment and thanked the judicial appointees for their service to the city. He stated that the appointees have the necessary qualities to address the enormous caseload and positively impact New Yorkers' lives.

In conclusion, the judicial appointments and reappointments made by Mayor Adams aim to enhance the functioning of the justice system and provide justice to all New Yorkers in a timely and efficient manner. The appointees are well-equipped to handle the challenges the city faces and are dedicated to making New York a safer, more just, and equitable place for all.
