

Faegre Drinker Honored as 2023 Law Firm of the Year by Philadelphia Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts

Faegre Drinker, a law firm with a rich history in the United States, has been recognized as the "Law Firm of the Year" by the Philadelphia Volunteer Lawyers for the Arts (PVLA). This award celebrates the outstanding pro bono work done by the firm's attorneys for artists and cultural organizations in the greater Philadelphia area.

Founded in 1837 in Indianapolis, Faegre Drinker has since expanded to 22 offices worldwide and has become a global leader in the legal industry. The firm has always prioritized serving the community, and this award is a testament to its continued commitment to pro bono work.

The seven attorneys recognized for their outstanding pro bono work in the arts community are Robert Cannuscio, Charlotte Damico, Elizabeth Diffley, Sabra Drummond, Robin Sampson, Steven Schwartz, and David Woolf. They have provided free legal services to artists and cultural organizations through PVLA over the past year, spanning multiple practice areas such as corporate, labor and employment, and intellectual property.

PVLA is a nonprofit legal services organization that aims to empower artists by providing free legal assistance and resources. The organization's mission is to support a thriving culture of creativity in the greater Philadelphia region by assisting artists and cultural organizations with legal representation, advocacy, and counseling in primarily non-litigation matters.
