

Judge Clarence Cuthpert Jr. Leads Ethics and Professionalism Program at University of Georgia Law School

Judge Clarence Cuthpert Jr. has been appointed as a group leader at the University of Georgia Law School, spearheading an essential program that acquaints incoming law students with the crucial aspects of ethics and professionalism. This initiative, conducted collaboratively by every law school in Georgia, in conjunction with the State Bar of Georgia Committee on Professionalism and the Chief Justice's Commission, plays a pivotal role in shaping the ethical foundation of aspiring legal professionals.

The annual program, which recently convened on August 11th, boasts a comprehensive agenda designed to immerse students in interactive discussions on ethics and professionalism. Guiding these discussions are esteemed group leaders, who encompass both judges and lawyers. Judge Cuthpert's involvement in this initiative demonstrates his dedication to fostering ethical awareness and professionalism among the legal community's next generation.

This year's session, attended by approximately 194 students, marked a significant milestone in the University of Georgia Law School's ongoing commitment to nurturing its students' ethical and professional acumen. Among the participants in Judge Cuthpert's group was Andrea Bell, an accomplished graduate of Heritage High School in Rockdale County.
